

United States District Court
EASTERN DISTRICT OF TEXAS
SHERMAN DIVISION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA §
v. § Case Number: 4:17-CR-001
EDWARD JAVIER CATANO LOPEZ (7) § Judge Mazzant
§
§
§

MEMORANDUM OPINION & ORDER

Pending before the Court is Defendant's Motion for Compassionate Release (Dkt. #357).

The Court, having considered the Motion, the response, the record, and the applicable law, finds that the motion must be DISMISSED for lack of jurisdiction.

I. BACKGROUND

On July 26, 2018, Defendant Edward Javier Catano Lopez ("Lopez") pleaded guilty to a four-count indictment (Dkt. #201). The offenses included: (1) Conspiracy to Possess with the Intent to Distribute Cocaine while on board a vessel subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, in violation of 46 U.S.C. §§ 70503(a)(1) and 70506 (b); (2) Possession with the Intent to Distribute Cocaine while on board a vessel subject to the jurisdiction of the United States and aiding and abetting, in violation of 46 U.S.C. § 70503(a)(1) and 18 U.S.C. 2; (3) Conspiracy to Possess with the Intent to Distribute Cocaine Base while on board a vessel subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, in violation of 46 U.S.C. §§ 70503(a)(1) and 70506(b); and (4) Possession with the Intent to Distribute Cocaine Base while on board a vessel subject to the jurisdiction of the United States and aiding and abetting, in violation of 46 U.S.C. § 70503(a)(1) and 18 U.S.C (Dkt. #201).

Lopez was sentenced to 180 months imprisonment for each of the four offenses, all to be served concurrently (Dkt. #277). He is serving his sentence at FCI Oakdale II. See <https://www.bop.gov/inmateloc/> (Reg. No. 26873-078). The Bureau of Prisons calculates his release date will be October 4, 2029 (Dkt. #358).

Lopez seeks compassionate release based on his underlying medical condition, arguing it presents an “extraordinary and compelling reason” to grant a sentence reduction (Dkt. #357). The Government opposes the sentence reduction, arguing: (1) Lopez has not demonstrated “extraordinary and compelling reasons” supporting a sentence reduction; and (2) a sentence reduction is not warranted under the § 3553(a) factors (Dkt. #358).

II. DISCUSSION

A judgment of conviction imposing a sentence of imprisonment “constitutes a final judgment and may not be modified by a district court except in limited circumstances.” Dillon v. United States, 560 U.S. 817, 824, 130 S. Ct. 2683, 177 L.Ed.2d 271 (2010) (quoting 18 U.S.C. § 3582(b)); see also 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c). One such circumstance, invoked by Lopez, arises from 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c)(1)(A)(i), which authorizes a district court to reduce a term of imprisonment when “extraordinary and compelling reasons” for a reduction exist that are “consistent with applicable policy statements issued by the Sentencing Commission,” and other procedural and substantive requirements are met. 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c)(1)(A).

Although Lopez has met § 3582(c)(1)(A)’s exhaustion requirement, he has not met the statute’s requirement that “extraordinary and compelling reasons” exist “consistent with applicable policy statements issued by the Sentencing Commission,” warranting a reduction of his sentence. Lopez’s motion, therefore, must be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction.

A. Lopez Has Met § 3582(c)(1)(A)’s Exhaustion Requirement.

Lopez’s compassionate-release motion may only be considered if he first meets § 3582(c)(1)(A)’s exhaustion requirement. The statute provides that a court may not consider any modification to a defendant's sentence under § 3582(c)(1)(A)(i) unless a motion for such a modification is properly made by the Director of the BOP or by a defendant who has fully exhausted his or her administrative remedies. 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c)(1)(A). The Director of the BOP may request a sentence reduction in court at any time. Id. A defendant may also make such a request, but only after fully exhausting remedies within the BOP or after 30 days have passed since he or she sought administrative remedies. Id.<sup>1</sup>

Before filing his Motion, Lopez submitted a request for compassionate release to the warden at FCI Oakdale II, claiming his underlying health condition—a debilitating shoulder injury—warrants sentence reduction (Dkt. #1364, Exhibit A). On August 15, 2020, Lopez received a response denying his request (Dkt. #357). Lopez has, therefore, met § 3582(c)(1)(A)'s exhaustion requirement.

B. Lopez Has Not Met § 3582(c)(1)(A)'s Requirements for Sentence Modification.

- 1. Lopez must meet § 3582(c)(1)(A)'s requirement that "extraordinary and compelling reasons" exist "consistent with applicable policy statements issued by the Sentencing Commission," warranting a reduction of his sentence.

Under § 3582(c)(1)(A), a district court may grant a sentence reduction if it finds that (1) "extraordinary and compelling reasons warrant such a reduction," (2) "such a reduction is consistent with applicable policy statements issued by the Sentencing Commission," and (3) such a reduction is appropriate "after considering the factors set forth in [18 U.S.C. § 3553(a)] to the extent that they are applicable." 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c)(1)(A).

Congress did not define what constitutes "extraordinary and compelling reasons" for a sentence reduction under § 3582(c)(1)(A), but rather delegated that authority to the Sentencing

---

<sup>1</sup> In 2018, Congress passed the First Step Act, Pub. L. 115-391, 132 Stat. 5194, which, among other things, amended 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c)(1)(A) to permit a defendant, in addition to the Director of the BOP, to move for a sentence reduction.

Commission. In 28 U.S.C. § 994(a)(2), Congress granted the Commission broad authority to promulgate “general policy statements regarding application of the guidelines or any other aspect of sentencing or sentence implementation that in the view of the Commission would further the purposes set forth in [18 U.S.C. § 3553(a)(2)].” And, as particularly relevant here, in 28 U.S.C. § 994(t), “Congress instructed the Commission to ‘describe what should be considered extraordinary and compelling reasons for sentence reduction [under § 3582(c)(1)(A)], including the criteria to be applied and a list of specific examples.’” United States v. Garcia, 655 F.3d 426, 435 (5th Cir. 2011) (quoting 28 U.S.C. § 994(t)).

The Commission’s policy statements, issued under 28 U.S.C. § 994(t), are binding concerning what should be considered extraordinary and compelling reasons for sentence reduction under 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c)(1)(A). As the Fifth Circuit has explained, “a common sense reading” of § 3582(c)(1)(A)’s phrase that a sentence reduction must be “consistent with applicable policy statements issued by the Sentencing Commission,” is that, “regardless of whether Congress wanted [the Commission’s] policy statements to be binding in the sentencing context, it wished them to be binding in § 3582(c) proceedings.” Id. “If a sentence reduction is inconsistent with a policy statement, it would violate § 3582(c)’s directive, so policy statements must be binding.” Id.; see also Dillon, 560 U.S. at 827 (explaining that the Commission’s pertinent policy statements are binding on courts where 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c)(2)—using the same language as § 3582(c)(1)(A)—permits a sentencing reduction based on a retroactive guidelines amendment only if “such a reduction is consistent with applicable policy statements issued by the Sentencing Commission”).

Thus, Lopez cannot obtain a sentence reduction under § 3582(c)(1)(A) merely by asserting reasons that he, or this Court, might believe are sufficiently “extraordinary and compelling” to justify a sentence reduction. Instead, under the plain text of 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c)(1)(A) and 28 U.S.C. § 994(t), as well as controlling precedent, Lopez's proffered reasons must be consistent with the Sentencing Commission's applicable policy statement concerning what should be considered extraordinary and compelling reasons for a sentence reduction under § 3582(c)(1)(A).

2. Lopez fails to satisfy § 3582(c)(1)(A) because his alleged “extraordinary and compelling reasons” for sentence reduction are not “consistent with applicable policy statements issued by the Sentencing Commission.”

Lopez's compassionate-release motion turns on his assertion that his shoulder injury constitutes an extraordinary and compelling reason to reduce his sentence. Lopez's assertion fails because it is untethered to the Sentencing Commission's binding applicable policy statement in section 1B1.13 of the Sentencing Guidelines. Section 1B1.13 describes what will be considered “extraordinary and compelling reasons” for sentence reduction under § 3582(c)(1)(A)(i) and provides no basis for a reduction based on this injury.

Section 1B1.13 allows a sentence reduction for “extraordinary and compelling reasons” only if the reasons are “consistent with this policy statement.” U.S.S.G. § 1B1.13(1)(A), (3).<sup>2</sup> Application note 1 to the policy statement explains that “extraordinary and compelling reasons exist under any of the circumstances set forth below,” which include only: (a) a defendant suffering from a terminal illness or other medical condition “that substantially diminishes the ability of the defendant to provide self-care within the environment of a correctional facility and from which he or she is not expected to recover”; (b) a defendant at least 65 years old who “is experiencing a serious deterioration in physical or mental health because of the aging process” and “has served at least 10 years or 75 percent of his or her term of imprisonment, whichever is less”; (c) a defendant who has minor children without a caregiver or with an incapacitated spouse or partner who needs the defendant to be the caregiver; or (d) “[a]s determined by the Director of the Bureau of Prisons, . . . an extraordinary and compelling reason other than, or in combination with, the [above] reasons.” Id., comment. (n.1(A)–(D)).

---

<sup>2</sup> The policy statement is binding under the express terms of § 3582(c)(1)(A), and because it concerns only possible sentence reductions, not increases, it is not subject to the rule of United States v. Booker, 543 U.S. 220, 125 S.Ct. 738, 160 L.Ed.2d 621 (2005). See Dillon, 560 U.S. at 824–28 (rejecting the proposed application of Booker in the related context of a proceeding under § 3582(c)(2)); United States v. Doublin, 572 F.3d 235, 237–39 (5th Cir. 2009) (rejecting application of Booker to sentence reductions under 18 U.S.C. § 3582).

Consistent with the application note, the BOP has issued Program Statement 5050.50 (“PS 5050.50”), which describes the BOP’s consideration of compassionate-release requests. PS 5050.50, which was amended effective January 17, 2019, following the passage of the First Step Act, sets forth in detail the BOP’s definition of circumstances that may support a request for compassionate release, limited to the same bases identified by the Commission: serious medical conditions, advanced age, and family circumstances.<sup>3</sup> See PS 5050.50 ¶¶ 3–6.

Neither the Commission’s policy statement, nor PS 5050.50, provide a basis for compassionate release based on Lopez’s injury. Lopez filed his motion with this Court seeking compassionate release under 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c)(1)(A) on the grounds that he suffers from a debilitating shoulder injury that causes severe pain and loss of movement. But his condition does not provide a basis for compassionate release. Though Lopez argues he has had to wait several months for shoulder replacement surgery and the pain is causing him difficulty caring for himself, this does not present a significant enough basis for compassionate release. Application note 1 requires any serious physical injury diminishing capacity to self-care to be one which the individual is not expected to recover from U.S.S.G. § 1B1.13(1)(A), (3). It appears Lopez’s health

---

<sup>3</sup> PS 5050.50 also requires consideration of a list of nonexclusive factors: “the defendant’s criminal and personal history, nature of his offense, disciplinary infractions, length of sentence and amount of time served, current age and age at the time of offense and sentencing, release plans, and ‘[w]hether release would minimize the severity of the offense.’” United States v. Saldana, 807 F. App’x 816, 819 (10th Cir. 2020) (quoting PS 5050.50 ¶ 7).

condition, though painful, is stable and will be corrected imminently with surgery. Lopez is not subject to a terminal illness and there is also no evidence he is unable to function in prison, aside from his temporary shoulder pain. Lopez has not indicated that he has any restrictions, aside from loss of mobility while waiting surgery. His age of 39 also weighs against granting compassionate release, because he is seemingly healthy despite his shoulder. Further, BOP currently lists Lopez as a Care Level 2 inmate, meaning he is a stable patient who requires clinician evaluations every six months and his medical and mental health conditions are manageable. Though lamentable, Lopez's depression also does not rise to the level for compassionate release.

Lopez failed to provide any evidence that he meets the guidelines for compassionate release under the Commission's policy statement. See United States v. Stowe, No. CR H-11-803 (1), 2019 WL 4673725, at *2 (S.D. Tex. Sept. 25, 2019) (citation omitted) (stating that the defendant generally "has the burden to show circumstances meeting the test for compassionate release"). Because Lopez's compassionate-release motion seeks a sentence reduction based on alleged "extraordinary and compelling reasons" that are not "consistent with applicable policy statements issued by the Sentencing Commission," he fails to meet the requirements of § 3582(c)(1)(A)(i).<sup>4</sup>

3. The First Step Act did not alter the substantive criteria for compassionate release under § 3582(c)(1)(A).

Following the enactment of the First Step Act, the Sentencing Commission's policy statements have not been updated. The result has been courts across the country have been divided on the question of whether Section 1B1.12 and its application notes still apply to the "extraordinary and compelling reasons" determination under 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c)(1)(A). Despite this divide, the Court finds it does not now have authority under section 1B1.13, application note 1(D), to determine for itself what constitutes “extraordinary and compelling reasons” to modify his sentence (Dkt. #268 at 10-11).

---

<sup>4</sup> Given Defendant's failure to meet § 3582(c)(1)(A)'s requirements, the Court need not address whether the applicable 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a) factors support a sentence reduction.

The First Step Act amended § 3582(c)(1)(A) to permit a defendant to move the district court directly for compassionate release, overriding those parts of section 1B1.13 of the Sentencing Guidelines providing that only the Director of the BOP may file such motions. See supra n.2. The First Step Act amendments to § 3582(c)(1)(A), however, did not change the substantive criteria that district courts must apply in making those decisions. The amendments also did not shift the authority to develop such criteria from the Sentencing Commission to the courts.<sup>5</sup> Section 1B1.13’s application note 1(D) requires the Director of the BOP to determine whether an inmate has adequately demonstrated extraordinary and compelling reasons for sentence modification other than, or in combination with, the reasons described in subsections (A) through (C) of application note 1, i.e., a medical condition, age, and/or family circumstances.

Among circuit courts, the Tenth Circuit first considered the issue when it addressed whether “post-sentencing developments in case law” might constitute an extraordinary and compelling reason under § 3582(c)(1)(A). See United States v. Saldana, 807 F.App’x 816, 818-20 (10th Cir. 2020). Rejecting this argument, the Tenth Circuit held “neither § 1B1.12 commentary nor BOP Program Statement 5050.50 identify post-sentencing developments in case law as an ‘extraordinary and compelling reason’ warranting a sentence reduction.” Id. at 820. Consistent with Saldana, the Tenth Circuit has continued to look to section 1B1.13 as binding guidance to determine what constitute extraordinary and compelling reasons under § 3582(c)(1)(A). See United States v. Pinson, 835 F.App'x 390, 394 (10th Cir. 2020) (acknowledging that the application notes to section 1B1.13 still contain the applicable policy statement governing compassionate-release motions); United States v. Sears, 836 F.App'x 697, n.3 (10th Cir. 2020) (same).

---

<sup>5</sup> To the contrary, the First Step Act left unchanged two critical statutory commands vesting the Commission, not courts, with authority to set the applicable standard for “extraordinary and compelling reasons” warranting a sentence reduction: (1) any sentence reduction under § 3582(c)(1)(A) must still be “consistent with applicable policy statements issued by the Sentencing Commission”; and (2) under 28 U.S.C. § 994(t), “[t]he [Sentencing] Commission, in promulgating general policy statements regarding the sentencing modification provisions in § 3582(c)(1)(A) of Title 18, shall describe what should be considered extraordinary and compelling reasons for sentence reduction, including the criteria to be applied and a list of specific examples,” id. (emphasis added).

Other courts, including this Court, have reached the same conclusion as the Saldana court; i.e., while the First Step Act expanded prisoners' access to the courts to file compassionate-release motions under § 3582(c)(1)(A), it did not alter the substantive standards governing these motions. See, e.g., United States v. Dodd, 471 F.Supp.3d 750, 757–58 (E.D. Tex. 2020) (“The fact that Congress's change to § 3582's procedural mechanism necessarily overrides a Sentencing Commission policy statement concerning the same procedural mechanism cannot be translated into congressional intent to alter the statute's provisions governing the merits of compassionate-release motions.”); United States v. Lynn, No. 89-72, 2019 WL 3805349, at *4 (S.D. Ala. Aug. 13, 2019) (explaining that “there is no ... inherent incompatibility between a statute allowing defendants to move for compassionate release and a policy statement allowing BOP a role in determining whether compassionate release is warranted, and thus no basis for deeming the policy statement [in section 1B1.13] overridden”); United States v. Ebbers, 432 F.Supp.3d 421, 427 (S.D.N.Y. 2020) (“Congress in fact only expanded access to the courts; it did not change the standard.”).

Although the Fifth Circuit has not addressed this issue in a published opinion, it has recently issued at least one decision that, consistent with Saldana, treated section 1B1.13 as the Sentencing Commission's “applicable” policy statement for a § 3582(c)(1)(A) motion. See generally United States v. Bell, 823 F.App'x 283 (5th Cir. 2020) (per curiam). In Bell, the defendant sought to appeal the denial of his compassionate-release motion under 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c)(1)(A) on the grounds that his sentence was “unduly long and [that] his guilty plea was not knowing and voluntary.” Id. at 284. The Fifth Circuit dismissed the appeal as frivolous because the defendant’s stated grounds for release were not any of the grounds contained in the commentary to section 1B1.13, and, therefore, the stated grounds were inconsistent with the policy statements of the Sentencing Commission as required by the statute. Id. While the court did not address the issue of whether the First Step Act changed the binding nature of the sentencing guidelines, section 1B1.13 must be binding because the defendant’s attempt to depart from the guidelines would not have been deemed frivolous otherwise. See also United States v. Chambliss, 948 F.3d 691, 693 (5th Cir. 2020) (discussing the First Step Act’s procedural changes to § 3582(c)(1)(A) and affirming the district court’s denial of compassionate release, which applied section 1B1.13’s policy statement describing when extraordinary and compelling reasons exist for the purpose of sentence modification).

The Court notes, however, that several circuits, beginning with the Second Circuit, have reached a different conclusion. In United States v. Brooker, 976 F.3d 228 (2nd Cir. 2020), the Second Circuit held, because the First Step Act allows both inmates and the BOP to file compassionate-release motions under § 3582(c)(1)(A), section 1B1.13 now applies only when such motions are made by the BOP and is inapplicable when a compassionate-release motion is made by a defendant. Id. at 235–36. The Fourth, Sixth, and Seventh Circuits have agreed, largely or entirely, with the Second Circuit’s conclusion. See United States v. McCoy, 981 F.3d 271, 282 (4th Cir. 2020) (holding that “[a] sentence reduction brought about by motion of a defendant, rather than the BOP, is not a reduction ‘under this policy statement,’” i.e., under section 1B1.13, and therefore section 1B1.13 is not “applicable” to such motions); United States v. Gunn, 980 F.3d 1178, 1180 (7th Cir. 2020) (agreeing with Brooker and holding that there is no “applicable” policy statement for § 3582(c)(1)(A) motions after the First Step Act); United States v. Jones, 980 F.3d 1098, 1109 (6th Cir. 2020) (agreeing with Brooker and holding, “[u]ntil the Sentencing Commission updates § 1B1.13 to reflect the First Step Act, district courts have full discretion in the interim to determine whether an ‘extraordinary and compelling’ reason justifies compassionate release when an imprisoned person files a § 3582(c)(1)(A) motion”).

This Court remains persuaded that section 1B1.13’s substantive provisions apply to § 3582(c)(1)(A) motions. The Court’s conclusion is driven by the fact that, through the First Step Act, Congress amended procedural provisions of § 3582(c)(1)(A), but left unamended the substantive criteria applicable to § 3582(c)(1)(A) motions. See United States v. Conyers, No. 4:12-CR-016-SDJ, 2020 WL 7480695, at *4–7 (E.D. Tex. Dec. 18, 2020). The First Step Act left unchanged two critical statutory commands vesting the Commission, not the courts, with authority to set the applicable standard for “extraordinary and compelling reasons” warranting a sentence reduction. First, any sentence reduction under § 3582(c)(1)(A) must still be “consistent with applicable policy statements issued by the Sentencing Commission.” Second, “[t]he [Sentencing] Commission, in promulgating general policy statements regarding the sentencing modification provisions in § 3582(c)(1)(A) of Title 18, shall describe what should be considered extraordinary and compelling reasons for sentence reduction, including the criteria to be applied and a list of specific examples.” 28 U.S.C. 994(t) (emphasis added).

Under the circumstances, the Court cannot conclude the First Step Act’s procedural modification to § 3582(c)(1)(A), allowing inmates as well as the BOP to file compassionate-release motions, renders “inapplicable” the Commission’s policy statement on the substantive requirements governing such motions. See Conyers, 2020 WL 7480695, at *4–7. Section 1B1.13’s provisions concerning “extraordinary and compelling reasons” for a sentence reduction are, on their face, procedurally neutral. The Court can discern no principled reason to treat a purely procedural expansion of § 3582(c)(1)(A) as nullifying section 1B1.13’s substantive guidance on compassionate release. There is also no reason to believe that Congress intended to effectuate, through the First Step Act, the implementation of multiple, varying standards for courts’ consideration of compassionate-release motions under § 3582(c)(1)(A): one text-bound standard for BOP-filed motions and a myriad of differing standards for defendant-filed motions to be developed and applied on a case-by-case basis by district courts across the country. See Conyers, 2020 WL 7480695, at *4–7.

Congress decided to leave both § 3582’s requirement that any reduction be consistent with the applicable policy statement and section 994’s authorization and directive of the Sentencing Commission to promulgate the policy statement undisturbed. Because the language of the statutes at issue is unambiguous and provides no basis to nullify entirely or in part the application of section 1B1.13’s substantive criteria to § 3582(c)(1)(A) motions, the Court concludes that section 1B1.13 provides the Sentencing Commission’s “applicable” policy statement concerning the standard to be applied in evaluating whether “extraordinary and compelling reasons” support a sentence reduction. See id. Likewise, the Court remains bound by Fifth Circuit precedent confirming that the Sentencing Commission’s policy statements are binding in § 3582(c) proceedings. See Garcia, 655 F.3d at 435 (“If a sentence reduction is inconsistent with a policy statement, it would violate § 3582(c)’s directive, so policy statements must be binding.”).

For these reasons, the Court will adhere to the controlling text of § 3582, together with Supreme Court and Fifth Circuit precedent, confirming that any proposed sentence reduction under § 3582(c)(1)(A) must be consistent with applicable policy statements issued by the Sentencing Commission.

* * *

To determine this case, it is enough for the Court that the Fifth Circuit's binding precedent continues to treat § 3582 as a demarcation of jurisdiction. Because Lopez has failed to meet the controlling requirements for compassionate release set forth in § 3582(c)(1)(A), his motion for compassionate release must be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction.<sup>6</sup>

III. CONCLUSION

It is therefore ORDERED that Defendant's Motion for Compassionate Release (Dkt. #357) is DISMISSED for lack of jurisdiction.

SIGNED this 5th day of April, 2021.

AMOS L. MAZZANT
UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

---

<sup>6</sup> In the alternative, the Court is also unable to order Lopez to home confinement. The BOP has exclusive authority to determine where a prisoner is housed; thus, the Court is without authority to order home confinement. 18 U.S.C. § 3621(b); see also United States v. Miller, No. 2:17-CR-015-D (02), 2020 WL 2514887, at *1 (N.D. Tex. May 15, 2020) ("[N]either the CARES Act nor the First Step Act authorizes the court to release an inmate to home confinement.").